CHINCH BUGS AND HEAT RUIN GRAIN CROPS

The chinch bug pest is destroying all small grain in the northeastern part of Will County and parts of southern Cook County. Farmers are plowing the infested fields under. The bugs having ruined the wheat and barley fields, are now invading oat and corn fields. Millions of these bugs are swarming on the paved highways and are so thick that often cars skid when running over these bugs. The lower parts of corn stalks are literally covered with these bugs which suck the juice out of the stalk causing it to wither and die. Farmers are using tar, creosote, kerosene, arsenic of lead, gasoline and cattle dip in their fight to stop the ravages of the pest with varying degrees of success. In some instances deep furrows are plowed and oiled poured in the trenches. When the bugs crawl up the loose earth they slip back into the ditch. Post holes are also dug and the bugs in their travels fall into them.

A barley field on the old Hirsch farm north of Mokena on Wolf road has been destroyed and the bugs by the million started across the Wolf road Wednesday morning. They have attacked a corn field of Ervin Marti on the east side of the road.

Henry Schoeneck reports that the bugs are attacking water plants in the creek and that many of the bugs are found in the water after water plants loaded with the insects die off and drop into the water. Millions of these insects have been seen to go in swarms over bridges into fields on the other side of the creek. About the most effective method to kill the bugs is to plow the infested grain, bugs and all. Old time farmers say that the chinch bugs infested wheat fields in this section 40 and 50 years ago and were so bad that the farmers stopped raising wheat for years and got rid of the bugs. Since the World War farmers have gone into the raising of wheat and barley quite extensively and the chinch bugs have since appeared again. Crops will be very poor this year as a result of being burned by the hot weather, lack of rain and the ravages of the chinch bugs.

Oak Lawn Garden On Honor Roll

The growing interest in beautifying yards has been very evident in Oak Lawn for several years. Many of our gardens which show the care and planning of season after season are worth special visits during the spring, summer and autumn.

One of our most enthusiastic and persevering gardeners, Mr. Frank Wilson, has been honored by the Chicago Tribune, by being chosen as one of eight, from an area including the south half of Chicago and adjacent suburbs within a radius of forty miles, who was placed on their Flower Garden Honor Roll.

In an article in Sunday Tribune of June 18, the writer commends him for maintaining a large yard in fine, trim despite handicaps of sand, shade and drought.

The landscaping in his yard at 5363 W. 96th St., which was done by himself, is a source of joy and inspiration to all those familiar with it, especially the school children, who call daily and take flowers back to brighten their room and whose stimulated interest and enthusiasm is most gratifying.

Miss Pfaff to Teach In Frankfort School

The Frankfort school directors have engaged Miss Eva Jean Pfaff to teach the primary department of this school for the next school year, succeeding Miss Nellie Brandt who has taught this department for the past several years.

Theatre Offers Bargain

The cost of theatre entertainment will be almost cut in half at the Rialto and Princess theatres in Joliet according to an announcement made by Will Burns, advertising manager.

The cut in prices means that 4 tickets at the Rialto theatre can be purchased for $1 which otherwise cost $1.60 and 6 tickets on the Princess theatre can be purchased for $1 which otherwise would cost $1.50.

There are no restrictions and any amount may be bought. These tickets are good any day any time at theatre for which they are bought. Sale starts at noon standard time and closes at 11 p. m. standard time.

Those wishing to buy tickets in advance may do so by getting their order in on or before July 1st. On mail orders money-order must accompany letter.

Orland Child Hurt In Peculiar Accident

Arthur Granit, six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Granit of Orland Park, injured in a peculiar accident Monday evening about 7 o'clock. He was playing in the yard of Leroy Yates, a neighbor. He got inside of a ten gallon crock and tried to squat down in it and became wedged in so tight that he could not get out. He began to struggle and the crock suddenly broke. A jagged piece of the crock cut a deep gash on the knee and cut a tendon. He was taken to the office of Dr. E. G. MacMahon in Mokena and later was taken to Little Company of Mary hospital on 95th street. He is home now.

Mokena Polling Place Changed

At the June meeting of the Will County Board of Supervisors held a week ago, judges of election for next year were named and changes made in polling places.

The records in the office of the county clerk show that the judges named for Mokena the second precinct of Frankfort township for next year are: Chas. Smith, Philip Hacker, and Christ Kohl.

The Mokena voting place which has been located in the Cooper & Hostert garage for a number of years, has been changed to the Mokena Motor Sales garage on Wolf road. The new voting place will be used next spring at the primary election.

Give the Mokena Firemen A Lift the Fourth of July

Plans for the benefit dance of the Mokena Fire Department to be held at the Mokena Men's Club pavilion on Wolf Rd. for the evening of the 4th of July have been completed and every one is cordially invited to be present. There will be novelties to please old and young. For good old time come to Mokena. The proceeds of the dance go for the new fire truck.

Big Dance at Frankfort the 4th

There will be 4th of July doings at the Frankfort Grove. In the afternoon there will be sports and races of all kinds and in the evening there will be a big dance.

New Orland A. C. Is Organized

The St. Michael A. C. has disorganized, because of lack of funds. The remainder of the games booked with St. Michael's will be taken over and played by the newly organized Orland A. C. The new club consists of all home town boys and is managed by Harry (Swede) Halanan.

Sunday the Orland A. C. plays the "Aces Of The Air" from Chicago at Orland Park.

Anyone wanting to book games with the Orland A. C. please get in touch with the manager.

The return game with Mokena is not on August 1st as reported last week but will be August 6th.

St. Mary's, Mokena Scene of Wedding

A beautiful private ceremony was performed at St. Mary's church on Saturday June 24th at 3 p. m. when Alfred Heiman was united in marriage with Miss Alice Van Lienen of Chicago.

The bride was attired in a powder blue silk lace gown with matching accessories. The bride's attendant, Miss Marjorie Holmes of Chicago, wore a pink organdie outfit. The corsages were of pink tea roses and lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents in Mokena. The rooms and tables were beautifully decorated in green and white. Supper was served to fifty-three guests.

Many beautiful and useful gifts were presented to the Newly-Weds by their friends and relatives with wishes of a long happy wedded life.

DON'T MISS THE TINLEY PARADE

The Tinley Park Legionnaires are all set for July Fourth. The grove at Saenger Hall will be open at 1 p. m., daylight saving time and there will be plenty of action from then on until far into the night. The parade will take place at six o'clock headed by the Tinley Park Community Band and the band will also render a concert in the grove at 7:15. Immediately after the concert the hall will be available for dancing. If you have made any dates for the Fourth you better cancel them and plan to spend the National Holiday with the Legion.

There will be plenty of refreshments at the grove and the smiling commander, James Barry, will be on deck to welcome all hands. A number of Legion posts from Chicago have promised to participate in the parade. Let's get together on the Fourth.

St. John Picnic Big Success

The picnic for the children of the St. John's Sunday School was held on Tuesday in the Village Grove near the church. It was thoroughly enjoyed by a fine crowd. Nearly every one of the Sunday School was present and many others.

Among those who won prizes were Mr. and Mrs. Nick Yunker and Jeanette Cooper, we do not recall the other winners.

The ice cream and lemonade went all too fast. Such things are all too much desired on these very warm days.

Then the Bean game went very good and many won fine things. About a half dozen grab sacks were emptied by the children.

Thanks to the Sunday School teachers, this picnic was planned by them for the children and they did it well. Then the ladies who prepared the supper deserve special thanks.

The thing of greatest pleasure perhaps was to sit back and see a hundred and twenty children at one time at the tables enjoying their supper. St. John looks forward to a bigger picnic later in the season.

Mokena Garden Club To Hold Picnic

The Mokena Garden Club will hold their July meeting, Friday July 7th at St. John's church. This is the annual meeting and picnic. A pot luck dinner will be served. Depending on the day, it will be decided after the club meets where they will hold the picnic. The meeting begins at 12 o'clock noon standard time.

Attend World's Fair

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schilling and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Kampe visited the Century of Progress Sunday, and folks if you go be sure and visit the Hall of States, The University of Illinois the Department of Health and the Aim of 4-H Club work and when you get tired take a half hour boat ride you can see all the buildings of the Century of Progress. It sure looks beautiful when lit up.

TINLEY MAN DIES IN HOSPITAL

John Rogers, aged 39 years who has served the Tinley territory as trouble shooter for the Public Service Company, died Monday morning in the St. James hospital, Chicago Heights following an operation performed Saturday. He is survived by his widow.

Mr. Rogers has been a resident of Tinley Park about a year.

Wm. Zarley, Surveyor of Will County Passes On

William H. Zarley, 55 years who served as surveyor of Will County since 1904 died Friday night in the Billings Memorial hospital, Chicago as a result of injuries suffered in a fall at his home in Joliet.

Mr. Zarley was one of the pioneer families of Joliet. His grand father Reason Zarley, came to Joliet in 1831 when the settlement was comprised of only a few rude cabins. Wm. Zarley was born in Joliet on January 29, 1878 and except for the time he was away at school, spent his life here.

Mr. Zarley was a graduate of the Joliet high school and later attended the University of Illinois. In 1900 he became assistant to Noah Whitney, county surveyor, and in 1904 succeeded to that office which he held up to the time of his death.

He was married in 1908 to Ruth Alexander of Channahon.

Mr. Zarley was a prominent figure in Masonry and it is said that he was in line for the thirty-third degree, the highest rank attainable in Masonry, next year.

Funeral services were held from the Masonic Temple in Joliet Monday afternoon.

Burial was in Willard Grove cemetery, Channahon.

New Lenox to Play Tinley Park Team

New Lenox will play the Tinley Park baseball team at 10:30 a. m., July 4th at Tinley Park.

Scattered Showers Do Some Good

Scattered showers have been reported all around, but Mokena has had only a few drops. Last Saturday a heavy shower fell in Joliet and almost up to New Lenox. Sunday evening a very heavy shower drenched the country southeast of Orland. At Tinley Park a very heavy rain fell Sunday evening. Wednesday evening a heavy shower swept the Blue Island region. Last Sunday evening a small shower fell at Mokena. The latter part of last week a good shower fell in Green Garden.

A good shower fell in the Mokena and surrounding territory Thursday evening, breaking the dry spell.

Tinley Park Farmer In Auto Accident

Edward Ryan well known Tinley farmer met with an auto accident Wednesday morning when a car bearing a Michigan license, crashed into his car at 159th and Cicero.

Chicago Youth Killed When Car Upsets On 143rd St., Near Orland

A fatal auto accident occurred on 143rd street near the Wm. Junker farm west of Orland Park at 6 o'clock Sunday morning when a car driven at a rate of 65 miles an hour left the pavement and when the driver attempted to get back on the pavement, the car overturned and slid along the pavement for 30 feet. A young man riding in the rear seat was instantly killed when the glass in the car door broke and severed his jugular vein and throat.

Chief of Police John Helenhouse of Orland Park was summoned as also were the county police. The corner's office was notified and an ambulance was sent for the body.

According to the story told Chief Helenhouse, Eugene Hayes, 9330 Herbert ave., Chicago, the driver of the car, who escaped injury, runs a store in Chicago and he had taken Arthur Connors, aged 23, of 803 Yale Ave., Chicago who clerked in Hayes' store out for a good time Saturday night. After taking in a beer party they finally picked up Miss Smith of Eggleston Ave., Chicago. After driving around the greater part of the night they got on the wrong road and finally wound up on 143rd. Miss Smith was in the front seat with Hayes while Connors occupied the rear seat and when the car upset he was killed. Miss Smith escaped unhurt and the car was not damaged much.

The county road truck in charge of Andrew Ludwig was called out to clean the oil, gasoline and blood from the pavement at the scene of the accident.

DROP NEGRO GOLF CLUB PLAN IN ORLAND TWP.

The negro golf club which was to have been started east of Orland on 143rd street, has been dropped as the result of the many protests made against the proposed club by the property owners adjoining the proposed club site. Lumber which had been hauled on the site for the club house, was hauled away last week.

Tinley Park Hatchery Has Sold 100,000 Chicks

The Community Hatchery located at Tinley Park and managed by Harry Fullbrook, has been more than busy this spring and summer. Over 100,000 chicks have been sold so far by this hatchery and the orders have kept coming in so that the big battery of brooders has been kept in full operation right along.

CHURCH CLOSES AFTER 79 YEARS OF SERVICE

The last service commemorating the 79th anniversary of the First German M. E. church of Green Garden township, was observed last Sunday, with Rev. C. E. Schellhase in charge.

This last closing service ended a period of 79 years of activity in the community on the part of the congregation, which owing to a heavy decrease in membership, has decided to discontinue this church and the remaining members have affiliated with other churches.

Back in 1854 the first conference of this denomination was held in the home of Henry Karch on the Karch farm with the District Superintendent Rev. George L. Mulfinger, presiding. Here the First German M. E. church of Frankfort township was organized. A church was built and was in use in Frankfort township for 17 years.

Frederick Hasenjaeger, Henry Bruns, Henry Karch and others of the community were among the first trustees of this congregation.

In 1871 the church was moved to Green Garden township and has been in use there for 62 years.

It is with a feeling of regret that members of the older generation see the old church home pass out of existence.

The church property is to be sold in the near future and the money derived from this sale will be used for the benefit of the Rose Hill cemetery adjoining the old church site.

ILLINOIS
STATE NEWS

Plans to compel the payment of personal property taxes on automobiles throughout Illinois by the withholding of state motor vehicle licenses were shattered by Governor Horner's veto of the first two bills embodying the project. His pen killed the bill which would require a local assessor to furnish each automobile owner who schedules a car a certificate showing that the schedule has been filed. The proposal of the legislature was to require that this certificate be filed with the secretary of state with the owner's application for a state license. The companion bill embodying the second part of the plan was called up for passage in the senate but objectors stopped it with assertions that the governor's action rendered the second proposed law ineffective.

One hour's discussion in the house of representatives was sufficient to kill the anti-sedition teaching bills, sent over from the senate. The action taken was concurrence in a report from the revenue committee recommending the two measures do not pass. There was no record vote but the "ayes" overwhelmed the "nays" in a viva voce register. Not in any sense committing itself to seditious or communistic utterances in colleges of the state by expunging the bills from the calendar, the house felt that failure to define the term "seditious matter" was sufficient cause for refusal to send them farther along in the legislative process.

Ten approved Illinois areas in which soil erosion control work is just now being launched under provisions of the government's emergency conservation act include 2,650 square miles, or 1,696,000 acres, about one-fourth of the seriously eroded land in the state, according to figures prepared by the soil survey division of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. The ten areas, including parts or all of the counties designated, are as follows: 1.—Jo Daviess; 2.—Stephenson, Carroll, Whiteside and Ogle; 3.—Knox, Peoria, Stark and Fulton; 4.—Fulton and McDonough; 5.—Brown, Pike and Schuyler; 6.—Pike; 7.—Jersey, Madison and Macoupin; 8.—Randolph and Monroe; 9.—Perry, Washington and Jackson; 10.—Williamson, Saline, Hamilton and Franklin. Sites for the civilian conservation corps camps to be established in the areas are being selected and public meetings held to explain details of the plan to interested land owners. The purpose of the project is to provide useful occupation for unemployed citizens of Illinois in the construction and carrying on of works to check run-off water and reduce the carrying of silt into the Mississippi, Illinois and Ohio rivers and their tributaries, thereby aiding in flood control and land conservation.

Cut worms have attacked the corn east of Towanda so that general replanting is necessary, R. J. Laible, McLean county farm adviser, announced. H. A. Dewert, farm adviser of Woodford county, said that replanting in his county has been done because of damage by the worms.

STATE BREVITIES

Lewis O. Brockway, seventy-nine years old, for thirty-three years recorder of Lake county, and Miss Anna Botsford, his chief deputy during those years, were married at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Nicholas L. Johnson, fifty-five years old, dry worker, reformer, and church leader in Batavia for years, pleaded guilty on two indictments of larceny by bailer before Circuit Judge William J. Fulton in the Kane county court at Geneva. He was sentenced to from one to ten years in the state penitentiary at Joliet, the sentences to run concurrently. Until a month before his arrest on March 10 Johnson had been secretary of the Batavia Savings and Building association and vice president of the Batavia National bank. He was seized when investigators learned following an audit of the accounts of the building association that Johnson had taken $17,353 of the association's cash for his own use.

Capt. Maurice Bernhardt, cousin of the "Divine Sarah" and himself an adventurer, sailor, and soldier, died at the refuge of the Little Sisters of the Poor in Chicago. He was one hundred and two years old. For many years Captain Bernhardt had been a resident of Chicago, employed during the last decade as a model at the Art Institute.

Mrs. Jane Jackson, one hundred and seven, one of the oldest residents in Illinois, died at her home at Scales Mound.

A trust fund of more than $2,000,000 to establish and maintain a free dental dispensary for the needy is created by the will of the late W. G. Zoller of Chicago, former vice president and treasurer of the Bell & Zoller Coal company.

Misappropriation and misapplication of funds, waste, graft, pay roll padding, looting, and general mismanagement were charged against the former west park board of Chicago, which was appointed by former Governor Emmerson and was headed by W. R. James as president. A report to Governor Horner by Harry Joseph, president of the present park board, showed the condition in which this board found the park system and the park finances when it took office last January. State's Attorney Courtney started an investigation of alleged violation of the civil service act.

CHILDREN'S STORYBy
THORNTON W. BURGESSWHEN A LONG NOSE IS USEFUL

"SHORT-TAIL certainly is a funny little fellow," thought Peter, as he waited for Short-Tail to return. "The shape of his body is a whole lot like that of Miner the Mole, and just getting glimpses of him, as I did, I don't wonder I thought he was a Mole. But now that I have seen more of him he reminds me of other people, too. I don't wonder he is often taken for a Mouse by people who don't use their eyes as they should. And then the quickness with which he moves, appears and disappears, and the fierceness with which he hunts remind me of Shadow the Weasel. He certainly is a funny little fellow. For one thing, he has got a funny nose. I must ask him about that nose."

"Who has got a funny nose?" demanded a sharp squeaky voice. "Who has got a funny nose? If you mean me, I would have you to know that there is nothing funny about my nose. No sir, there isn't a thing funny about my nose. It would be a funny nose if it were not just as it is. What do you find funny about it, Peter Rabbit? I want to know what you find funny about it. Don't you know that it isn't polite and it isn't kind to talk about people's looks behind their backs? You ought to know that."

All this was poured out by Short-

Tail the Shrew before Peter could recover from his surprise at Short-Tail's sudden reappearance, seemingly from nowhere.

"Why—wh—where'd you come from, and how did you know what I was thinking?" stuttered Peter.

"I came out of this little hole," chuckled Short-Tail, pulling aside some leaves to show a little round hole that quite evidently was the entrance to a tunnel. "I find the tunnels of Miner the Mole quite useful when I want to keep out of sight. As for knowing what you were thinking, how could I help it when you were talking out loud to yourself? Now what is funny about my nose?"

"Well," replied Peter, looking a little foolish at having been overheard, "I don't suppose it is really funny, but it is such a different nose from the noses I am used to that it seems funny to me. In the first place, why is it so long?"

Short-Tail wriggled his nose thoughtfully. "I never have thought of it as being long, but perhaps it is," said he. "I can tell you one thing and that is that it isn't a particle too long for my needs. You people with big eyes may not need long noses, but my nose is as good as eyes to me. As a matter of fact, my eyes don't amount to much, but if anyone has got a better nose than I have I don't know who it is. Eyes don't amount to much, but a good nose is the most necessary thing in the world."

Even while he was talking, Short-Tail was poking about among the leaves and turning them over with his nose, for it is quite impossible for Short-Tail to keep still. Suddenly with his nose to the ground, just as Bowser the Hound runs when he is following Reddy Fox, Short-Tail started straight for a piece of bark lying on the ground. As he disappeared beneath it a fat beetle ran out from the other side. Then Short-Tail appeared and Peter could see that he was following that beetle by means of his nose and not with his eyes.

"That is what a long nose is good for," chuckled Short-Tail, as that beetle disappeared down his throat.

GRAPHIC GOLF

MRS. VARE'S PUTTING METHODS

FORMERLY a comparatively weak putter, Glenna Collett Vare has lately strengthened this position of her game noticeably. The reason—a slow but smooth backswing with the eyes fixed earnestly on the ball. This keeping the eyes on the ball, the head still and making sure that the clubhead strokes it firmly and accurately while at right angles to the direction line has apparently suited her case admirably. Mrs. Vare gauges the distance to the hole carefully, taking due consideration of the varying slopes. Her policy is one of "safety first," being careful not to putt too hard. She attempts to determine the direction by some point in direct path to the hole and putting over this spot. The stroke is just hard enough to get the ball up to the hole, making sure that if the ball does not drop it will at least stop within a foot radius of the cup.

WHEN SCHOOL IS OVER

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

"WELL, school is over," so they say.

They come and put their books away. Exams are over, they have passed, And so they're through with school, at last;

Or so they say—and so I thought When there was nothing teachers taught

That I would ever need to know. Yes, so they think, and I thought so.

Like them, I thought that school was through,

And no more studying to do, And yet I find at every turn That learning is to learn to learn.

The problems that had bothered one Were not all over, just begun. Life has its scholar and its fool, For life is just another school.

No patient teacher will explain. Now our own brawn and our own brain

Must work the problem out alone. The answer hidden, rule unknown. We now must turn from book and text, From each old problem to the next.

Now school is over, so they say; They really start to school today.

but by the rare few. Those few are the people of compelling personality, the ones who just radiate power and leadership. For it is by that inner "core of quietness" that they are in command of themselves, which is the only way to achieve and maintain command of others.

With a "core of quietness" at the center of your being you are like a rock, impervious to attack. No matter how disconcerting influences may beat around you, no matter what the outward pressure, you retain your power, your poise, your awareness. You are like a modern soldier in a modern car with high-powered weapons against a primitive man with an armful of stones. You cannot be turned off your course, you cannot be frightened, intimidated, demoralized. Your standards are never in danger, your head level, no matter what happens. It guarantees that you will be of help and inspiration to others.

To have that "core of quietness" at the center of one's being is of particular importance to a woman. She is the one to whom a family buffeted by stress and strain comes home for comforting, for wise judgment and sound advice, for balance and rest.

OUR

By ANGELO PATRI

"YOU DO IT"

"WHAT are you making all the fuss about, Dick? You can tie your shoe if you want to."

"I can't. I did try. It's too hard for me."

"It isn't hard. It's easy enough once you set your mind to it."

"Is it easy?"

"Yes. Easy as can be."

"Then you do it. It's hard for me."

Things that are easy to us are difficult for children. They have to make an effort to adjust their muscles for the task. They have to think about and direct every move.

A wrong motion, and it is easy for a child to make one, sends a whole series of movements the wrong way. Dick was passing his shoe string over instead of under and that made it impossible for him to tie the knot. As soon as that one motion had been set right he tied the knot easily.

Some children tire sooner than others. For them effort is annoying. They will escape it if they can and if they form the habit of calling for help at the first sign of trouble they will not gain power. Let the child try to do his job. When he cries for help hold your hand. Watch what he does and find the difficulty. Set that right, encourage him to go ahead. He needs help over the hard place but he needs to go the rest of the way himself.

It helps a child to see grown-up people do the things they expect little ones to do.

What you would have the children do and think easy to do, you should do yourself. If you want them to speak softly and go gently you must speak and move with gentleness. If you want them to be well-mannered you must practice being good-mannered on all occasions. Little children are not ready to take over grown-up people's manners. They have to hear you say, "How do you do?" "I am sorry to disturb you." "Won't you have this chair?" I think you will be more comfortable," before they say it.

Telling or showing once is not enough. You must show many, many times for the one telling. Show by your own conduct that the thing you wish the child to do is easy for you to do and he will have more faith in its being possible for him. Then make it easy for him to do by providing the right atmosphere. A child cannot be patient in an atmosphere of impatience. He cannot be gentle and well-mannered in an environment that is neither the one nor the other. Make things easy for him and he will find them so.

THE CONTRARY CHILD

CHILDREN who are contrary and stubborn are a great trial to their mothers and teachers. When one comes along the best thing to do is to study him to learn the secret of his affliction, for an affliction it certainly is.

When a child says, "I won't," whether in words or actions does not matter—he closes his mind and sits inside in the darkness of his anger and fear. You never meet the one without the other. Anything that brings fear brings anger with it. They are twins. Until we can help the child free himself of the fear he cannot come out and play. He is a prisoner to his fear, or as we are terming it now, his stubbornness.

Children who are not certain about their power to do what is asked of them are likely to balk. They have not the power of language to tell us all they are feeling. We have to win him to trust and confidence before he will venture another step.

We cannot accomplish this by scolding and shaking and slapping. All that adds to the difficulty. You can't expect a child to feel free and brave when you are raging at him and slapping him. Instead of that wait a minute until your wrath cools and your reason takes hold. Wait until you can see this fear-ridden, obstructed child, closed in the darkness of his unformed mind, wait until you are sorry for his plight and desire to help him, before you speak or move.

Then, take a good look at him. If he seems to be enjoying his contrary disposition say, very calmly, with assumed indifference, "Very well. You needn't," and occupy yourself to the exclusion of him and his deeds. Find something interesting to do so that his eyes follow you and he longs to be at it too. When he slides along to you and says, "Let me, let me," be gracious, but not too effusive, and say, "If you like," and let him. In his interest and enthusiasm he will be released from his bonds and go merrily for a time. When you find him in a confiding mood, talk to him gently. Tell him if he wants to be glad and happy he must find a way of saying "Yes." Don't rub it in. Touch it gently and pass on, for there are other times coming.

If he has an attack at a dangerous time, when he wants to do what will hurt him, or refuses to do what will save him, and your hands and heart are full, hold on to your reason, pick him up firmly, without anger, and put him where you want him to be. If he has a tantrum reach for a bowl of cool water and douse him with it until his mood changes. But never lose your own control.

CHAPTER X—Continued

"He didn't tell us any untruths about that, Miss Peyton; he simply kept his mouth shut. It was on something more important. He says that when he left the fraternity house, Pat Thayer was alive."

"And why isn't that the truth?"
"I can't tell you why, Miss Peyton, but I am saying that I am sure it is a lie. I'll bet my right hand that when Larry Welch left that fraternity house, Pat Thayer was dead. And Larry knew it!"

She did not indulge in dramatics. She merely sat very still and her body seemed to get cold as ice.

She stared at the huge figure opposite.

Hanvey met look for look. And she, searching the moonlike face for a vestige of reassurance, saw nothing but grim honesty.

"Then," she gasped, "you think Larry killed him?"

"I can't say that, Miss Peyton," he amended gently. "I do believe that he lied when he said Thayer was alive when he left. And now I know why."

"Why, then?"

"To shield you. He had just learned your secret. He knew—probably—that you had been to see Thayer. And if he didn't kill Thayer, then he found the body when he got there and thought you had done it. It's a situation as old as romance. But at any rate, it was a pretty fine thing for him to do, because by his own admission Thayer was alive while he was there, which makes it certain that he must have done the killing."

"Larry didn't do it, Mr. Hanvey. I feel that."

"So do I. But if he didn't—who did?"

She shook her head. "I don't know."

"He couldn't, you say."

"It wasn't a fight."

"Is that—is that a question, Mr. Hanvey—or a statement?"

The big man smiled slightly. "I don't know. Do you?"

"I didn't kill him."

Hanvey rose and shook his head. "This ain't any cinch, Miss Peyton. If I'm to believe what I hear: you didn't kill him and neither did Larry Welch. It almost looks like if I carry the investigation far enough I'll find out he ain't dead."

Suddenly he started forward: "I'm sorry, Miss Peyton. I didn't mean to crack any bum jokes. Honest, I didn't. I'm just a d-d blundering jackass."

Out in the courtyard of the jail, John Reagan turned admiringly to his companion.

"I'll hand it to you, Jim: you're a marvel. But how in h-l do you do it?"

"Oh! I dunno, John. Shooting square with 'em, maybe. And maybe it's because they look me over and decide I'm so dam' stupid I wouldn't understand a lie if I heard one."

"Hm. . . And now?"

"What do you think, John: Welch or Miss Peyton?"

"Neither," snapped Reagan. "It was Max Vernon, just like I said at first. It happened this way, and I'll bet a nickel on it: Tony Peyton went there just like she said. Then Vernon went to Thayer's room and killed him—not meaning to kill him when he went in, maybe, but doing it in a fight. Larry Welch gets there a little later and finds the body. Thinks Tony did it. Pulls the hero stuff. What do you think of that?"

"Sounds reasonable," commented Jim guardedly. "Anyhow, I reckon there ain't any objection to lettin' Welch and Miss Peyton out on bond, is there?"

"None whatever," agreed Reagan. He rubbed the palms of his hands together. "I feel like we're getting somewhere at last."

"So do I," grinned Jim Hanvey. "The thing I am puzzled about is this: Where?"

CHAPTER XI

Hanvey gazed at the gray walls of the jail and nodded as though having reached a startling conclusion.

"I believe our next move, John, is to have a talk with Mister Maxwell Vernon."

"Good Lord! Has it taken you all this time to think of that?"

"Uh-huh. My brain was never strong on speed."

Reagan was earnest. "Quit kiddin', Jim. Why did you leave this palooka for the last?"

"Because I wanted to hear what everybody else had to say. From what you tell me, Vernon is lying high, wide and handsome, and I wanted to form some idea about what was truth and what wasn't."

"Sensible enough. Let's go."

Back into the brilliance of the warden's office, and thence down the dimly lighted corridor on which were the rooms used for those prisoners who seemed entitled to something better than the ordinary cells. The turnkey admitted them to a room identical with the ones occupied by Tony Peyton and Larry Welch. They stood in the doorway and Hanvey regarded the occupant through sleepy, half-closed eyes.

Vernon was seated on his cot. He had doffed coat and tie, and his shirt was open at the throat. His long black hair was somewhat tousled and his chubby face wore an expression of belligerence. His whole manner—even before a word was spoken—was combative.

Jim seated himself and smiled lazily at the prisoner. He felt rather sorry for the boy, fat, good-natured, easy-going. . . and now suddenly enmeshed in a tragedy which he couldn't quite understand. Jim's voice came soothingly.

"Things been happening pretty fast, ain't they, Son?"

Vernon looked up sharply. "What things?"

"Oh, plenty."

"I don't know what you mean."

"Shuh! Sure you do."

Max rose and tried to look dignified. He succeeded only in appearing somewhat ludicrous and entirely pitiful.

"I haven't anything to say, Mr. Hanvey."

"Well, what do you know about that? I haven't asked you anything, have I?"

"No, but—"

"Listen to me, Son: answer me one question."

"What is it?"

"Did you kill Pat Thayer?"

Vernon's eyes closed. He pulled himself together with a visible effort.

"No."

"Then I think you better talk to me plain and honest. Of course, if you did kill him, the best thing you can do is keep your mouth shut. Now—what say you?"

"Like H-l You Are! You're Trying to Mix Me Up in Pat Thayer's Murder."

"Nothing. I'm not going to talk."

"A' right. I ain't gonna argue with you." He reached inevitably for the golden toothpick. "Swell new car you got, Son."

Vernon was stonily silent.

"Swell car," repeated Hanvey. "Sure wish I could own one like that. But I wouldn't go buy one just after I'd had a row with another man."

"I didn't row with anybody."

"No? Not even Pat Thayer?"

Max was trembling. Boyishly, he was struggling to keep actual tears from his eyes. "You're trying to trap me! I know! And I'm not going to say anything. Not anything at all!"

"That's up to you, Son. But suppose you tell me this: What happened between you and Thayer in the fraternity house day before yesterday somewhere about one o'clock in the afternoon?"

"In the fraternity house? Nothing happened."

"You went to his room, didn't you?"

"No."

"Aw, Son! You know dog-gone good and well you went to Pat Thayer's room. Now why don't you tell us what happened?"

"I didn't go near his room," cried Vernon harshly. "I went to my own room and changed my clothes and then I left the house. I never saw Thayer for a moment all the time I was in there."

Jim shook his big head. "I hate to see you fighting me, Son, when I'm trying to help—"

"Like h-l you are! You're trying to mix me up in Pat Thayer's murder."

"I'm trying to get the truth. Does that mix you up?"

"No, but—"

"Just before you went to the fraternity house, you and Thayer had a big row on the campus, didn't you?"

"Who says so?"

"Several people. And also there ain't much question that you were pretty sore at him. Now I ask you this: Why?"

"I had reason enough. I thought he was my friend. I've been buddies with him for two years. He's been winning all my money at cards. I guess I would have been a dumbbell all my life if I hadn't got sore at him over something else."

"Stealing your girl, for instance?"

Max looked up sharply, and became boyishly dignified. "I—I'd really rather not talk about that angle of it, Mr. Hanvey," he said gently.

"As you say, Vernon. But when this other thing happened—you getting sore—what then?"

"I started thinking—for the first time. And I began to suspect that it wasn't all just accident that Thayer had been nice to me so long as I had money; but the minute I went broke he lost interest in me and started going with . . . that is, doing things to make me sore. And it struck me that it was queer he had always won at cards. Oh! I was stupid enough, but I waked up all at once."

"And you got about as mad as you ever were in your life. You went to Thayer's room in the fraternity house—"

"I did not! I told you before I never went near his room."

"So you did. I thought maybe you'd remembered that you were mistaken. Anyway, you were in the house at the same time he was. After awhile you left there hurriedly with a bundle under your arm, didn't you? What was in that bundle, Vernon?"

Max was nervous; his pudgy hands were twisted together and his eyes roved helplessly around the little room.

"A—A suit of clothes. The one I said I changed. I was taking it to the Marland Tailoring company for alteration and cleaning."

"Good. Now we're clearing up parts of the mystery." Jim turned to Reagan. "Suppose you check up on that, John. Just phone that company and make sure they have the suit, will you?"

"Sure." Reagan started to rise, but Max Vernon stopped him.

The boy's eyes were round with fear and beads of perspiration stood out on his forehead.

"Never mind," he said hoarsely. "The clothes are not there."

"You didn't take them?"

"N-no."

"Where are they?"

"I—I don't know. I guess I—I—lost them."

"You sure are an unfortunate young man," murmured Jim. "Losing a good suit of clothes that way. Well, anyway, after losing that suit, you drove on up to Steel City, didn't you?"

Vernon hesitated. Then he nodded.

"Yes."

"Alone?"

Max's cheeks were pasty. "Yes. Alone."

"And when you got there you traded in your car on a new one, didn't you? And paid the difference of twelve hundred dollars in cash. Where did you get the money?"

"I have plenty of money."

"But you just said a minute ago that Thayer laid off you because you were broke. How could you be broke and also have plenty of money?"

"I had it. . . I got it from Thayer. He owed it to me."

"I see." Jim beamed approval. "That clears up another mystery. You and Thayer were really friends, after all. He loaned you the twelve hundred dollars just like it was nothing, eh?"

"He gave it to me. He owed it."

"When did he give it to you, Vernon? When you went to his room?"

"I told you I didn't go to his room."

"I see. I guess he sent it to you by special messenger or something. Never mind that, though. But there is one thing I want to know: How did it happen that there wasn't any floor rug in the car you traded when you got to Steel City?"

Again that hunted, haunted light in Max's eyes.

"I don't know anything about any floor rug."

"Wasn't there one in your old car?"

"I don't know."

"Gee! You sure are a forgetful guy. Now what about that knife Mr. Reagan showed you an hour or so ago? That is yours, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"Where did you get it?"

"In Sicily. I've traveled a lot and I've always collected queer weapons."

"Did you have it in your hand at all day before yesterday?"

"No."

"Do you know it is the very knife with which Thayer was killed?"

"I know that's what Mr. Reagan said."

"You knew it wasn't on your wall where you always kept it, didn't you?"

"No! How was I to notice that one of the things was gone? And I didn't kill Pat Thayer, Mr. Hanvey. I swear I didn't."

Hanvey spoke softly. "Admitting that, Vernon: Why did you get mixed up in the robbery of the Marland National bank?"

Max stood rigid for a moment, then sank down on the cot. He buried his face in his hands. "I didn't have anything to do with that, either, Mr. Hanvey: honest I didn't."

* * * * *

The two detectives faced each other solemnly in the warden's office.

"Will you tell me why," Reagan asked—"when you had Vernon on the run, you didn't chase him? You knew he was lying, didn't you?"

"Sure, John—sure. And the more questions I asked the more lies he was gonna tell."

"Well, I'll say this for you, Jim Hanvey: You seem to rock along with all the delicacy of an elephant—but d-d if you haven't learned a heap about this case."

"What, for instance?" inquired Hanvey interestedly.

"In the first place, it's a cinch that Max Vernon killed Pat Thayer."

"You think so?"

"Sure. Don't you?"

"Durned if I know, John. I couldn't say for sure, anyway. There's still a lot of loose ends."

Reagan changed his tactics. He pointed an accusing finger at Hanvey. "Anyway, Jim—you think he was mixed up in that bank robbery, don't you?"

The fat man reflected for a moment, then nodded.

"Yeh—I do."

"And that," exclaimed Reagan, "is the first definite admission I've gotten out of you yet."

Hanvey was silent for a moment, then looked up brightly. "What'd you do with all the stuff Vernon had in his pockets when he was arrested?"

"Right here. Want to see it?"

"Yeh. . ."

The Star Spangled Banner

Let it rise, Let it rise, till it meet the Sun in his coming: let the earliest light of the morning gild it, and the parting day linger and play on its summit.

Copyright
(at Dunbar Hill Monument)

ACCORDING to many historians there were several ceremonies celebrating the first anniversary of American Independence on July 4, 1777, says the Detroit News. The records show that on that day the armed ships and galleys in the Delaware river, at Philadelphia, flew the "colors of the United States." On the same day a "flag bee" was held by the young ladies of Portsmouth, N. H., who with much patriotic enthusiasm and many heart thrills wrought out of their own and their mothers' gowns a beautiful Star-Spangled Banner. This coincides with a report that the Stars and Stripes were hoisted aloft on the vessel Raleigh in Portsmouth harbor on that date.

It was more than 150 years ago that Colonel Gansevoort and his little command of 800 men were defending Fort Stanwix, near the present site of Rome, N. Y. They had just heard that congress had passed a resolution authorizing the use of the Stars and Stripes.

They had no flag of the new pattern. The garrison was ransacked for material they could fashion into the new design. A blue coat was offered by Captain Swartwout to form the blue union. A soldier's wife donated a red petticoat for the red stripes, and the soldiers ripped their ammunition shirts to supply the white stripes. It was not a handsome banner, but it thrilled the hearts of its makers as they placed it on a bastion nearest to the attacking British and allied troops.

This is the first time, so far as the available records show, that the Stars and Stripes were actually displayed before a hostile and threatening enemy. The date was August 3, 1777.

The official birthday of the Stars and Stripes was June 14, 1777, when the Continental congress passed a resolution "That the flag of the 13 United States be 13 stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

Nearly six months before the adoption of the flag by congress, George Washington crossed the Delaware and captured 1,000 Hessians in his brilliant attack on Trenton. Artists of the time show the Father of Our Country crossing the river in a boat displaying the familiar design of the Stars and Stripes. Apart from this doubtful evidence, which may have originated in the artists' imagination, there is nothing to prove that the Stars and Stripes was in use at this time.

Many theories as to the true origin of our National flag have been advanced, none of which have been definitely proved. Some believe it is an adoption of the coat-of-arms of the Washington family, which contains both stars and stripes. Others credit Betsy Ross with the creation of the design. Others maintain the idea for the flag came from the Netherlands.

The fact that Francis Hopkinson, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, submitted a bill to congress in 1779 for the designing of the "flag of the United States of America," lends color to the belief that he was its creator.

The United States flag has had 48 stars only since July 4, 1912, the Independence day following the admission of the last two states, New Mexico and Arizona.

EARLY "FOURTH" CELEBRATIONS

Parades, Picnics, Patriotic Programs Order of the Day.

THE old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration of a quarter century ago was an event looked forward to with great interest and preparations by individuals, families, towns and cities.

The celebration usually was held in a grove, near the county seat or another prominent town, where there was an abundance of shade and water. Delegations would come from neighboring townships and hamlets, each with its procession of wagons for the old folks, women and children and a snappy cavalcade of boys and girls on horseback.

At the head of the procession the stars and stripes would be carried in sions would reach town early and patiently wait at the edge of town or along side streets until assigned their places in the "grand procession." Prizes were awarded for the best display by a visiting delegation. The grand parade would form at 10 o'clock, pass along the principal streets, circle the court house square, cross the river bridge and, with bands playing and banners flying, triumphantly enter the celebration grounds, while snapping firecrackers, fluttering flags and booming cannon proclaimed the sentiments of the day.

The county seat contribution to this grand parade was often extensive and spectacular. To be its commander or "chief marshal of the day" was a coveted distinction. Usually "Major" or "Colonel" somebody would be chosen and his word was law for that day. His red sash and hat with gold tassels distinguished him from the captains of delegations, who acted as his aids. To fill this position often made the occupant a candidate for sheriff, mayor or the state legislature. The grand procession, headed by this dignity and a brass band, often "took more than an hour to enter the grounds."

Upon reaching the grounds and feeding and watering the horses—no small task—the morning exercises began. The glee clubs would sing; the president of the day would deliver an address, and some favored school teacher would read the Declaration of Independence.

These exercises were only heard by those near the speaker's stand; for many were crowding around the pump or the barrels of "free ice water, as advertised," getting ready for dinner; while the noisy battle of fire crackers and torpedoes was being fought by small boys.

And then "dinner," with the tubs and baskets filled with old-fashioned food. Was there ever such sliced ham, juicy fried chicken, homemade rolls and doughnuts, eggs and pickles, jams, relishes, preserves, pies, cakes and hot coffee? A long table supplied the hungry wayfarer, but many preferred to dine by families or neighborhoods, even at the risk of being called "stylish and stuck up."

Sometimes there were supplies of "barbecued beef," "tumble inn" and huge kettles of black coffee free for all. When such attractions were advertised, people often drove from points 20 or more miles away.

Old-Time Celebration.

TRUTH OF SALUTE TO FRENCH HERO

"Lafayette, We Are Here!"
Said by Col. Stanton.

The late Col. Charles E. Stanton, who said "Lafayette, we are here!" had the strange experience of coining a probably immortal phrase and of hearing it credited almost as often as it was quoted to another man. Even President Wilson and Marshal Foch in formal addresses attributed to General Pershing the famous saying at the tomb of Lafayette in Picpus cemetery on July 4, 1917. It was a natural error, for General Pershing did speak extemporaneously on that occasion and it was easy for those not present to confuse his remarks with the preceding speech of Colonel Stanton that ended in the supremely appropriate salute to the French hero.

The fact of Colonel Stanton's authorship was never in doubt; it was early asserted in this newspaper and elsewhere in direct rebuttal of the Pershing fiction. But when a legend gains momentum it rolls on and on. It seemed doubtful that a disclaimer by General Pershing himself could right the popular mistake. Colonel Stanton, for his part, sealed his lips and with the most soldierly conception of duty permitted the world-renowned saying to be given constantly to his friend and commander. If General Pershing for 13 years made no emphatic effort publicly to dispel the myth he demolished it handsomely when he came to publish his memoirs in 1931 in these words: "It was on this occasion that utterance was given to an expression that could be born only of inspiration, one that will live long in history: 'Lafayette, we are here!' Many have attributed this striking utterance to me and I have often wished it could have been mine. But I have no recollection of saying anything so splendid. I am sure those words were spoken by Colonel Stanton and to him must go the credit for so happy and felicitous a phrase."

It was only after this declaration that Colonel Stanton said he had "remained quiescent during all these years, having a firm belief that historical accuracy would eventually prevail." The gallant and modest colonel had the final assurance that his contribution to the golden treasury of quotations would bear his name.—New York Herald-Tribune.

ROOSEVELT INAUGURAL HEARD AROUND WORLD

Telephone Service Has Had Big Part in Former Ceremonies

The wide use of telephone facilities during the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt calls to mind other inaugurations.

The inauguration that perhaps will be longest remembered by telephone men is that of President Taft, which took place in 1909. On Inauguration Day one of the worst blizzards in years swept the entire eastern part of the country, including Washington. Not only did it ruin the inaugural parade, but it tied up transportation and communication facilities and did thousands of dollars of damage to telephone property. To the Bell System's decision that such a situation should not recur is due in large part the country's present network of storm proof telephone cables.

Population Doubled Over Night

The first inauguration of Woodrow Wilson is remembered by telephone employees as that during which they were called upon to handle the telephone traffic of a city of which the population had doubled overnight. The condition had had no parallel in the history of the telephone business. More people than ever before were present, and the weather was perfect.

The second inauguration of President Wilson in 1917 was the last inauguration where the President spoke to the multitude without the aid of voice amplifying equipment. Thousands of people in the crowd, and even some of the distinguished guests in the reserved seats, heard practically nothing of his address.

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Frank Cheney and Mrs. Alvin Brueggeman spent Thursday in Chicago Heights.

The Martha Sewing Circle had their outing at the home of Mrs. Gustie Weber last Thursday.

The St. Peter's Evangelical church will have their outing in the Frankfort Grove, Sunday, July 2. Sunday school and English services at 10 o'clock. There will be games of various kinds in the afternoon. The church orchestra will also play during the afternoon.

The North Peotone church held their picnic at Andres Thursday afternoon and evening. The Frankfort church orchestra furnished the music for the picnic.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pfeifer attended the funeral of their cousin, Robert Dalke, held in Chicago Saturday afternoon.

Adeline and Dorothy Jarchow had their tonsils removed last Thursday in the Silver Cross hospital.

The 4 months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Brandau who has been very ill the past several weeks is somewhat improved.

The Frankfort M. E. church held their picnic at the Frankfort grove Tuesday afternoon. This was a private picnic.

Mildred Lorenzen is working in Joliet for Mrs. Edward Fuss. The latter is improving nicely after her recent operation.

Sylvia Engleman of Joliet well known here was married Wednesday June 21st to Wayne Chesmore of Iowa City, Iowa. They will make their future home in Iowa City.

The Frankfort Ball Team is looking for games with any team. Call Frankfort 16 and ask for Benny between 8:00 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Save the Vitamins

This is the time of year when it is easiest to have the vitamins in our meals, but it is also the season when it is easiest to lose them, for careless cooking of fresh fruits and vegetables may "cook out" the precious vitamins.

Particular care must be used in cooking the fruits and vegetables containing Vitamins A and C. A few of the most popular of these are: spinach, tomatoes, rhubarb, peaches, apples, apricots, prunes, asparagus, cabbage, green peas and cauliflower.

The most important thing to remember when cooking these foods is not to mix them with air. To avoid this, use a pressure cooker or a waterless cooker, rather than an open kettle. Be sure the butter used in cooking is fresh, for rancid fat speeds the oxidative destruction of Vitamin A; and don't use alkalis like soda in cooking for this hastens the destruction of the vitamins.

However, there is one excellent vitamin source about whose cooking you need not worry—fresh pasteurized milk which is not affected by cooking at ordinary temperatures, but retains all its rich supply of vitamins.

WHICH WOULD YOU CHOOSE?

If for some reason your diet were suddenly to be limited to two foods which two would you choose? There would probably be as many answers to that as there are people reading this question, but according to those who know, if you want to live and be healthy the only two foods that could even begin to do the job unaided are those two old friends, bread and milk. So says Dr. Henry C. Sherman of Columbia University and other men recognized as authorities on nutrition.

NEW LENOX

Miss Evangeline Lamore of Chicago is a guest in the home of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Sherwood.

Mrs. Merna Sievert and Mrs. Agnes Tauber were in charge of the bakery sale which the Royal Neighbors sponsored at the Dorothy Osmus store Friday afternoon.

The New Lenox Township Relief Organization met in the home of Fred Francis Thursday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Button and family have returned to their home in Ludden, North Dakota, after a vacation spent with friends and relatives here.

The Corp family reunion was held Sunday in Baker's woods, Manhattan.

Miss Millicent Snodgrass is a visitor in the home of Mrs. Loretta Garman.

Mrs. Lillian Whalen of Chicago was recent visitor in the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Wassner.

Billy Dallan spent last week in the home of his sister, and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Osborne. Mr. and Mrs. Roland Cagwin and family of Joliet have moved to the camp grounds for the summer.

The June meeting of the New Lenox Women's Club was held in the home of Mrs. Aurelia Bruns, Thursday. Dr. Janet Holt, president, was in charge. Mrs. Frances Gould and Mrs. Lucille Drake assisted the hostess at serving refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pfaff who have been living in Champaign, have returned to make their home in New Lenox.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jones and son Robert of Houston, Texas are guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Kercheval.

The condition of Mrs. O'Daniel, mother of Ellis O'Daniel, remains critical. Mrs. O'Daniel suffered a paralytic stroke last week.

ORLAND PARK

T. N. Mains who has been laid up for some time following an operation was in Orland Tuesday. His many friends are glad to see him out again and hope for his speedy recovery.

The Village Board met Monday night. The beer peddler license was not acted on due to the absence of the village attorney. A complaint was made by John Lindgren about a line fence controversy and the committee on streets and alleys was instructed to investigate the matter.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman S. Knox entertained the following guests on Sunday: The latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Forslund, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. H. Kauffman and daughter Jean of DesPlaines; Mrs. A. P. Ceander of Reno, Nevada.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Arnold entertained Mr. and Mrs. H. Reinhart and Miss Louise Reinhart of San Francisco, Calif., Sunday. Mrs. Reinhart was formerly Lillian Arnold of Orland Park and is a sister of Louis Arnold.

The societies of St. Michael's church Orland Park will conduct a picnic and chicken dinner July 4th. These dinners are justly famed for their excellence. Many beautiful and valuable prizes will be given away. The new cabins put up in the Daniel property are in big demand. These cabins are very popular and fill a long felt want.

The annual picnic held by the Christ Lutheran church last Sunday afternoon in the Forest Preserve was very well attended.

Public Service Co.,

Reduces Quarterly Dividend Payments

The Board of Directors of the Public Service Co., of Northern Ill., at a meeting held today, declared a quarterly dividend of fifty cents a share on the Company's par and no par common stock, payable August 1, to stockholders of record July 15. This is a reduction of 25 cents per share below the quarterly dividends paid on the Company's common stock since August 1 of last year. Prior to that time the dividend was $2.00 per quarter. The directors declared the regular quarterly dividends on the six per cent and seven per cent preferred stocks, payable on the same date as the dividend on the common stock.

The reduction in dividends on the common stock was necessitated by the reduction in rates which will become effective July 1. These reductions were tendered in response to pressure of the Illinois Commerce Commission, and will reduce revenues from electric and gas business in excess of $1,000,000 a year. The reduction affecting the electric rates includes the new 3 per cent Federal tax on residential and commercial business transferred by recent act of Congress from the consumer to the producer.

The Company has already made drastic economies in operating expenses to offset the large loss of revenue due to the general business situation. The directors decided that in order to cooperate with President Roosevelt in his present recovery program, no reductions in wages should be made.

Present estimates indicate that the gross business of the Company for 1933 will be about 5% less than for the preceding year. The decrease in revenue, the increases in taxation and the reductions in rates for both gas and electricity make necessary a

HOLD ON TO YOUTH

Summer Beauty Sense

By Marie H. Callahan, Editor
Modern Beauty Shop Magazine

It is a temptation to leave common sense as well as care behind us when we go vacationing, but for your own comfort and beauty be a little wise about exposing yourselves too suddenly to the sun. Remember that spending the first day of the vacation on the beach "getting a tan" will more probably result in a very painful sunburn instead.

Tan if you must, but take it slowly. Don't settle yourself on the beach determined to get a fine romantic tan on the very first day of your vacation. And by all means don't do this if you are spending your summer in the midst of the kind of friends who think back slapping is amusing.

A few minutes of exposure to the sun is enough on the first day; then gradually the length of time can be increased. In any case, before you go out first apply a generous coating of cream or lotion to the skin, remove the surplus and apply talcum powder. Then, on coming indoors, cleanse the skin with cold cream. After this, pat on a soothing lotion. If, failing to take these precautions, your skin should become red and burned, the irritation may be relieved by bathing with a simple lotion composed of one part of lime water and two parts of olive oil.

Freckles are another summer problem. If you have the kind of skin that freckles easily you may be comforted to know that the reason it is so sensitive is because of its natural delicacy, and that this type of skin if properly cared for is more beautiful than any other. A lotion safe and effective for clearing the skin of freckles is made as follows: one-half dram sulphur carbolate of zinc; one and a half ounces of glycerin; four ounces rose water; three drams cologne water, all shaken well together. This solution should be applied several times a day with a piece of clean linen or absorbent cotton.

Another common summer folly is the way we eat. It is said that fully 80 percent of the illnesses treated by country doctors during vacation time are simply cases of gastric disturbances caused by foolish food habits. In the summer we don't require as much food to keep up our energy as we do in the colder seasons so we should eat more lightly. Of course, for health and beauty the diet should always be built around fresh milk, fruits, and vegetables, but it is even more important to do this in the summer time, when it is doubly necessary that we have plenty of liquids and easily digested foods in our daily diet.

Thanks to modern beauty science, the maintaining of good looks during the summer months does not present the problems that it used to, in the days when we were martyrs to the marcel wave, which, like "mother's darling daughter" couldn't go near the water. Nowadays with a permanent wave acquired at the beginning of the summer we can swim and dive freely and emerge looking as fresh and waved as when we went in the water.

So arm yourself with common sense, plus protective skin creams; fresh milk, fruits and vegetables in your diet; and a permanent wave—and have a good time.

Summer "Cocktails"

Orange and Milk Foam.

2 eggs 4 tbsp. sugar
2 cups of fresh 1 1/2 cups strained milk orange juice
8 tsp. strained lemon juice Dash of salt

Beat the eggs slightly and add orange and lemon juices; then beat thoroughly. Pour into a glass jar, add the two cups of fresh milk, salt and sugar, and shake for one or two minutes. Grated nutmeg or orange rind, sprinkled on the drink before serving adds flavor and an additional touch of color. This recipe serves four people.

Raspberry or Pineapple Milk Shake.

2 cups of fresh 6 tbsp. pineapple milk syrup
4 tbsp. of raspberry 2 tsp. lemon juice
ry syrup or

Combine the ingredients in the electric mixer or a large fruit jar and shake well. This drink can be made even more attractive by pouring the mixture into tall glasses, and topping with one tablespoon of whipped cream, flavored and tinted with fruit syrup.

Chocolate Milk Shake.

2 cups fresh milk 4 tbsp. chocolate
2 tsp. cream (may be omitted if a less rich drink is desired) 1/4 tsp. vanilla

Have the milk and the cream chilled in the refrigerator. Turn into a cocktail shaker. Add chocolate syrup and vanilla. Shake.

Folly of Fashion

"So great was the weight of the elaborately padded garments worn by men to England during the reign of Henry the Eighth," points out Frederick Tisdale in an article in Liberty, "that a bench was built along the house of parliament so the fainting danQee could rest their matted thighs."

First Use of Loud Speakers

At the inauguration of Warren G. Harding in 1921, the Public Address System was used with great success. On that occasion President Harding addressed the greatest number of people that ever listened to one man's voice at one time in the history of the world up to then. The installation and successful operation of the amplifying system was hailed as "a telephone achievement ranking with the opening of the transcontinental line."

Radio broadcasting had come into existence in time for the inauguration of Calvin Coolidge in 1925, and as a result, not only did the people in Washington hear what was said during the ceremonies, but long distance telephone lines carried the words of the speakers to broadcasting stations in important cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and these stations sent the spoken words into the homes of listeners throughout the land. This was the first time that so wide an audience listened to any inauguration. The Coolidge inaugural also was memorable as the first during which photographs of inaugural scenes were received in distant cities within an hour after they had been snapped in Washington, this development being made possible by the newly perfected telephotograph apparatus of the Bell System.

Made "Talkies" of President

When Herbert Hoover was inaugurated in 1929, one more new product of Bell System research was available, the talking picture. Four picture companies were represented, and in spite of drizzling rain, the movie men stuck to the job and were rewarded with the first "talkies" of an inaugural.

The inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1933 had the advantage of the greater approach to perfection of the things which had been introduced at previous inaugurations. Radio equipment, for instance, was more perfect, and so were the telephone circuits which interconnected the nation's broadcasting stations. The telephone service in Washington could hardly have been improved, and the inaugural ceremonies were heard clearly by people not only in every part of the United States, but in foreign countries as well.

An Adventure in American History

All pictures from "The Pageant of America," courtesy, Yale University Press.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

TO MOST Americans mention of the event which we celebrate on July 4—the signing of the Declaration of Independence—brings to mind the famous painting of that historic scene which hangs in the rotunda of the Capitol in Washington. For it is through the eyes of John Trumbull, the Connecticut painter, that we have received most of our visual impressions not only of what took place in Independence hall in Philadelphia on July 4, 1776, but of many of the other great events in the American Revolution.

A short time ago Yale university commemorated the centenary of the opening of the oldest art gallery in this country connected with a college. The founder of that art gallery, the architect of the original building, was this same John Trumbull, whose body lies in a vault beneath the fine arts building which has succeeded the simple little structure which he designed and which housed the original collection of his canvasses that have since become so famous. The commemorative ceremonies, which consisted principally of showing again all of the Trumbull collection of paintings as they had once been displayed in the vanished building which he designed, not only served to honor the "painter of America's epic," but it emphasized once more the part which this university has played in the "visual education" of Americans in the history of their country.

It recalled once more an ambitious project of that institution in this educational field, begun more than a decade ago and, appropriately enough, brought to a triumphant conclusion during the year in which the sesqui-centennial of American independence was being celebrated. That was the publication of "The Pageant of America," a 15-volume pictorial history of our country which has "worked something of a revolution in the methods of presenting and studying American history."

The idea for such a project took form while the Yale University Press, which had just completed publication of another notable historical series, "The Chronicles of America," was experimenting with the presentation of the drama of American history through the medium of moving pictures. The result of this experiment was the outlining of a plan for a "pictorial chronicle of America" in book form.

There have been many "pictorial" histories of America but the majority of them have been comparatively valueless because "the pictures have often been an excuse to weaken the text, and the text has been an excuse to pass off hackneyed or deceptive pictures on the confiding reader." So the problem of the Yale authorities was not only to avoid a repetition of the errors which had given pictorial history a bad reputation but also to prepare a combination of pictures and text which would be scholarly enough to satisfy the most exacting "scientific historian" and lively and interesting enough to meet the demands of "popular appeal" without sacrificing anything of accuracy and authenticity.

But the most interesting story of all in connection with the presentation of this unique pageant is the story of the world-wide search for the pictures which went into it. It is the story of an adventure in American history, as romantic an adventure in many of its aspects as any incident which is recorded in our school histories. For it is the story of a nine-year search through private collections and those of governmental bodies, historical societies, libraries, museums, art galleries, learned societies and

1. French uniforms worn during the French and Indian War, 1754-1763, from the paintings by H. A. Ogden.

2. The earliest engraved likeness of Columbus, published in 1575, from the "Jovius portrait," the original source of all Columbus portraits.

3. Emigrants Attacked by Indians on the Western Plains—A typical incident of the opening of the trans-Mississippi country, after the drawing by F. O. C. Darley, the foremost illustrator of American life and history in that period.

4. The First Oil Well—"A derrick was erected in the neighborhood of Titusville, Pa., and in the year 1859 the boring for oil began. In the photograph Drake, wearing a silk hat, appears talking to his friend, Peter Wilson, a druggist of Titusville." From a contemporary photograph taken by John A. Mather.

institutes and religious and educational institutions not only in this country but in foreign countries as well. It is the story of some fine "detective work" in following clues, some of which ended successfully and some unsuccessfully, of persistence and perseverance in the face of baffling problems and seemingly insuperable obstacles—all in the name of historical accuracy! But out of it all came a total of more than 10,000 authenticated pictures as the basis for what is now recognized as the first and thus far the only real source book of Pictorial Americana. Incidentally, when the work was completed it represented the expenditure for capital account of more than $382,000, probably the largest sum ever spent for a single piece of historical research but a very modest amount when compared to the value and importance of the results obtained.

In considering the task before the Yale authorities it must be remembered that American history began long, long, before there were cameras to record historic incidents as they are recorded today. So the only pictorial record we have of some events of the greatest historical importance was made by artists equipped only with the crudest sort of instruments and materials for their work. But the importance of their accomplishment lies in the fact that they furnished "contemporary records" and the modern camera can be used for copying their work.

And here again comes in the matter of cost in producing "The Pageant of America," for in many cases the cost of securing a copy of some individual picture ranged anywhere from $100 up to $350. In two of the volumes of the series are 17 full-page illustrations (such as is shown above) which reproduce in colors the uniforms worn by participants in the various American wars.

The search for authentic paintings, daguerreotypes, lithographs and engravings of contemporary events and for charters, commissions and other documents preserved in official archives took the research staff of "The Pageant of America" into many strange places. It was recognized at the start that the discovery of America was only an incident in the discovery of Asia and that to illustrate the background of the beginnings of American history it would be necessary to find pictures which would show the influences in Europe as far back as the time of Carpin and Marco Polo, which led ultimately to Columbus' attempt to find the route to Asia by sailing west. So the earliest dated picture in the "Pageant" is a page from the Latin manuscript of Adam of Bremen in the Eleventh century, in which the first mention of Vinland, discovered by the Norsemen, was made. After considerable difficulty this manuscript was located in the Staats Bibliothek in Vienna.

Of portraits of Columbus, popularly regarded as the discoverer of America, there are legion. But it remained for the Yale research staff to trace back for the first time all these portraits to their original source and that original source is the "Jovius portrait" (shown above), an engraving which it is believed was first published in 1575 and which is a copy of a portrait that hung in the famous gallery of Paulus Jovius, archbishop of Nocera, a man of vast wealth who spent a fortune in collecting portraits of the great men of his time and who was an ardent admirer of the Italian navigator. It is believed that this is the only portrait of Columbus painted during his lifetime.

Back of a portrait which appears in another volume of "The Pageant"—"The Winning of Freedom," is a typical story of perseverance. When this volume was in preparation, the authors wanted a portrait of one of the German officers who fought under the British flag during the Revolution. None being available in this country, a search was begun through the American consul-general in Berlin. After considerable correspondence with various museums and private collectors, the consul-general learned that an excellent oil painting of Baron Friedrich Riedesel, who commanded the Hessians under Burgoyne, was still hanging in the castle of Neuenhof bei Eisenach, Hessen. Through the courtesy of Freiherr Albrecht Riedesel, a descendant of the Eighteenth century baron, permission was finally granted a year later to make a photographic copy of the original.

Even more devious was the trail which finally led to an authentic daguerreotype of William F. Harnden, founder of the express business in the United States. While assembling material for the volume "The March of Commerce," the editors came upon a very poor woodcut of Harnden in Stimson's "History of the Express Companies" published in 1858. Desiring the original daguerreotype from which this reproduction had apparently been made, they enlisted the aid of the officials of the American Railway Express company.

Through S. M. Baker, general auditor at Chattanooga, Tenn., they learned that the original had been in the possession of Harnden's son, who was living in San Francisco shortly after 1880. Using the San Francisco directories, they addressed identical letters to several Harndens listed therein. One of these was W. K. Harnden and he proved to be a grandson of William F. Harnden. W. K. Harnden replied that he believed the desired daguerreotype was in the possession of his elder brother, Frederic, then living in Palo Alto.

Such proved to be the case, but the end of the trail was not yet, for the elder brother could not locate the picture, as it had been in storage for some time. Finally, however, a year after the first inquiry a copy of the daguerreotype was received just in time to be reproduced and included in the pictorial history of the express business.

But not all descendants of past notables were as helpful as the Harndens. The Yale authorities tell the story of the search for an authentic portrait of a little known but important figure in the Revolution. They located one of his descendants in a small New England town, a woman, who owned a contemporary oil portrait of the Revolutionary fighter. But when appealed to for permission to reproduce the painting she refused, presumably because of the reticence and reserve which characterize the old-fashioned spinster lady of the Yankee type and also possibly because she feared that some injury to the painting might result.

So it was necessary to send a member of the editorial staff there for the purpose of coaxing the old lady to make it possible for her ancestor to be represented in this important historical work. The staff member found the portrait hanging in the parlor where it could not be photographed on the wall and he experienced great difficulty in persuading her to let him take it down from the wall. Then when he secured the necessary permission, she would not let him take the painting out of the house, so he had to bring a commercial photographer for more than one hundred miles in order to make certain of getting a good copy.

Lesson for July 2

JOSHUA

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 1:1-9; 23:3, 4, 14.

GOLDEN TEXT—Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest. Joshua 1:9.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Helping Joshua.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Captain Courageous.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Joshua Succeeded.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Source of Joshua's Strength.

The book of Joshua, from which our lesson is taken, is a history of the conquest of the promised land and its division among the tribes of Israel. It takes its name from its principal character, Joshua.

I. Joshua, the New Leader of Israel.

1. His appointment (Num. 27:18-20). The people were not to be left in doubt as to a leader when Moses was gone. The leader was to be appointed and to be given recognition before the people.

During the wilderness journey Joshua was Moses' minister and the captain of his army. When Moses was denied the privilege of going over the Jordan, Joshua was appointed to the leadership of Israel.

2. Joshua's fitness for the leadership of Israel (Deut. 34:9).

a. He was full of the spirit of wisdom. Although not dependent upon human wisdom, God selects as his representatives men whom he has endowed with the proper wisdom.

b. He was divinely ordained for the work at the hand of Moses, for "Moses had laid his hands upon him." This he had done at the commandment of God (Num. 27:18).

c. The people owned him as their leader. For successful leadership, a ruler must have the individual affection and allegiance of the people.

II. Joshua Commanded to Take Charge (vv. 1, 2).

Moses was dead, but God's work must go on; therefore, God issued the command for the new leader to assume his duty.

III. God Renews His Promise to Israel Concerning the Land (vv. 3, 4).

This promise had been given to Abraham and renewed to Isaac, Jacob, and Moses. It is now renewed to Israel as they were about to enter upon its possession. The nearest this territory was ever possessed was during the reign of David and Solomon. This land still belongs to the Jews, and in God's own time they will possess it. The world will not be at peace nor the fullness of divine blessing come upon the world until Israel is in this land. The present distressful condition in Germany and other parts of Europe may hasten the movement of Israel to their own land. As these notes are written, Great Britain is being advised to open Palestine to the Jews.

IV. The Promise of the Divine Presence (v. 5).

Joshua was entering upon a perilous and difficult enterprise. The difficulties before Joshua were:

1. The Jordan river (v. 2). This river was now at its flood (Josh. 3:15), making it impossible for armies to cross.

2. People were living in walled cities (Num. 13:28). Notwithstanding this, God was ready to insure success.

a. "I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee" (v. 5).

b. "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee" (v. 5).

c. "As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee" (v. 5). Because of his conviction that God had been with his master he was willing and ready to cross the Jordan at its flood tide and courageously meet his enemies.

V. Conditions of Blessing in the Land (vv. 6-9).

1. "Be strong and of good courage" (v. 6). His mission was to go in and conquer the land and then to divide it among the tribes for an inheritance. To do this required courage.

2. Unwavering obedience to the Word of God (v. 7). In all his work he must conform his life to the law of God. In order to accomplish this the law of the Lord must be in his mouth continually. Joshua rendered prompt obedience.

VI. Joshua's Retrospection (Josh. 23:3, 4, 14).

As his life was now drawing to a close, he summoned the people and rulers and gave farewell counsel.

1. Rehearses God's goodness (v. 14). God had given rest to Israel from all their enemies and had brought them into the land of plenty.

2. All that had been done for them was by the hand of the Lord (vv. 3, 4). God had fought for them. No one was able to stand against them.

The Vision of Life

This vision of life in the cross is not a vision of despair but of confidence and hope, because behind it there is the empty tomb, and the figure with wounded hands outstretched to bless, ascending into glory.—G. A. Studdert Kennedy.

He Never Fails

"If we never desire anything but what God desires, we will always attain our object, because God's will can never fail of accomplishment."—J. M.

BIBLICAL CITY IN DEAD SEA WATER?

May Confirm Destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah.

A message to the London Times from a correspondent in Cairo stated that an airman flying recently over the southern part of the Dead sea reported having seen a "town lying beneath the water." This town, according to an assistant to Sir Flinders Petrie, interviewed by a representative of the London Observer, is thought of the London Gomorrah or another of the "five Cities of the Plain" that were destroyed at the same time with them. Archeologists are not in agreement as to the probable site of those cities. The northern shores have been considered the most likely. But in the Scriptural record mention is made of a little city nearby named Zoar, a city to which Lot and his daughters fled, a city so small as not to be as wicked as the rest! A city of that name at the south remained into Roman times.

There is abundant evidence that there was a Canaanitish civilization in that region at a time when the plain was "well watered, everywhere as thou goest toward Zoar"—like the garden of the Lord. The place was filled with city states as the Scriptural record suggests, each with its king: "And it came to pass in the days of Amraphel, king of Shinar, Arioch, king of Ellasar, Chedorlaomer, king of Elam and Tidal, king of Gollim, that they made war with Bera, king of Sodom and with Birsha, king of Gomorrah, Shinab, king of Admah, and Shemeber, king of Zebolim and the king of Bela (the same is Zoar). All these joined together in the vale of Siddim (the same is the Salt sea)."

Suddenly all the kings departed and with them all the "inhabitants of the cities and that which grew upon the ground," for more than 20 centuries. An "earthquake with fiery eruptions" is postulated, and a consequent general desolation. "And Abraham looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah and toward all the land of the plain and beheld, and lo, the smoke of the land went up as the smoke of a furnace." Perhaps, too, the waters of the Dead sea were, before the disturbance, whatever it was, at a lower level. Now from the airman's height their depths even are visible, and it may be that the sequel of the story of the Judgment on Sodom and Gomorrah will be told.

Eczema Burned and Itched Terribly Healed by Cuticura

"Eczema broke out in pimples on my child's head and later spread to her neck and back. It burned and itched terribly and the little one scratched and cried continually. Her clothing hurt her so that I kept a very thin dress on her. Her hair came out in handfuls and what was left was lifeless and dry. The irritation prevented her from sleeping."

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I could see a difference after using them. I purchased more and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. J. K. Thompson, Energy, Texas, July 26, 1932.

Important Waterway

The Suez canal, opened in 1869, has a length of 101 miles, and a minimum width of 147 feet, 8 inches. The maximum draught of water allowed for vessels using the canal is 32 feet. The average time for transit through the canal is 15 hours 20 minutes. The canal is owned by a company, and Great Britain holds a controlling interest in the company.

Iced Drinks
Not Harmful
Says Authority

The fact that ice-cold drinks are not harmful unless swallowed too hastily is welcome news at this season of the year. Dr. Walter H. Eddy, Ph. D., Director, Good Housekeeping Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health, says "I cannot find anything to preach against in our national preference for cold drinks." He explains that by taking iced drinks slowly the liquid is tempered before reaching the stomach, thus avoiding the harmful results that might follow if the stomach were given a sudden cold shock.

Although carbonated beverages, properly made with pure ingredients are healthful, Dr. Eddy warns against too highly sugared drinks, because they increase thirst instead of quenching it.

Milk, buttermilk, and fruit juices should be summer drink leaders because they supply food needs as well as quenching temporary thirst. Milk of course is rich in proteins, minerals, vitamins; most fruit juices are good sources of iron and other minerals, as well as vitamins and easily assimilated sugars, while buttermilk is an especially desirable summer drink because it is an excellent preventive for intestinal troubles which are more apt to occur in warm weather than in cool.

FIRE DESTROYS FARM HOME
AS OWNER GOES FOR HELP

A short time ago the owner of one of the finest farm homes in Saunders county, Nebr., had his telephone removed as an economy measure. A few weeks later he and his family were awakened to find their beautiful modern house ablaze. In order to get help, he was obliged to drive several miles to Colon to summon the Wahoo fire department, and by the time help arrived, the house, with all its contents, was doomed. It was totally destroyed. Commenting on this catastrophe, the Lincoln, Nebr., Star terms the removal of that particular telephone the most costly economy imaginable. It calls attention to the fact that other farmers have done the same thing and that, obviously, one who owns and occupies such a fine home ought not to dispense with such an essential thing as a telephone. If this farmer had been able, through the use of this quick means of communication, to summon help quickly, the Star continues, it is probable that thousands of dollars might have been saved.

LONDON PAPER LISTENS IN ON CALIFORNIA EARTHQUAKE

Most of the newspapers in London made use of transatlantic telephone service for direct interviews with Californians at the time of the earthquake in Southern California early in March. One paper, the Evening Standard, carried a graphic description of actually hearing the sounds of the shocks over the telephone.

TINLEY PARK

Fifty friends and relatives from Tinley Park and Blue Island helped Lyle Aulwurm of Tinley Park celebrate his twenty-eighth birthday on Tuesday evening. The party took place on the lawn of his home. The yard was beautifully decorated with lanterns and gay furniture. Bing-bong was one of the leading games. Several other interesting games were also played. At mid-night a delightful lunch was served, beer being the main attraction. Lyle's many friends wished him many more happy birthdays. All the guests on departing declared that they had spent a wonderful evening.

Next Tuesday being the glorious Fourth of July all banks, post-offices and most places of business will remain closed.

A new dancing club has been formed in Tinley which is known as the Hen House Hop. Mr. Bucannon helped the young folks to a free dancing place by converting his big chicken house in the north Elmore subdivision into a cute dancing floor with a radio providing the dance music. The young folks who like to dance are enjoying several nights a week of dancing at the new dance floor. All report a good time.

Among those enjoying a few days vacation at Barren Springs, Michigan are: Mr. and Mrs. August Mesenbrink, Mrs. Emily Wyman and children.

Mr. Hedler of DesPlaines has been visiting with the Fred Arnold and C. A. Steinhagen families this week. The annual picnic of the German M. E. church held in the Brandau orchard last Thursday was very largely attended. The local band furnished the music.

Joe Berg, ex-professional ball player is instructing the young ball players of Tinley in the technique of baseball.

The Breitbarth families of Wishik, N. D. have been visiting with Tinley Park relatives and attending the World's Fair.

Miss Lillian Kay of Chicago was a week end guest in the home of the Fred Arnold and C. A. Steinhagen families.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Swisher are entertaining the former's mother from Palisades, Colorado.

Mrs. C. A. Steinhagen has been called to Aurora to assist in caring for her aunt who is quite ill.

H. C. Vogt is having the building formerly occupied by the Oesterreich Greenhouse, newly painted and decorated.

Carl Meyer spent Sunday in Chicago visiting with his sister.

FRANKFORT IN MEMORIAM

KNIPPEL—In fond and loving memory of our dear son and brother, Raymond J. Knippel, who left us so suddenly six years ago today, June 29, 1927.

There are griefs that cannot find comfort,
And wounds that cannot be healed,
There are sorrows so deep in the human heart
That they cannot be half revealed.

At evening's close, our memories are all we have to share,
Sweet memories of your dear heart it pains us so to spare;
At evening's close, we pray that you find quiet and repose,
In that sweet store of memory which comes at Evening's Close.

Signed: Mother, Dad, Brother and Sister.

Famous Actors and Actresses Played
Where Operators Now Handle Calls

The old California Theater in San Francisco, built in 1869 and a brilliant center of the drama for 20 years. Inset shows the plaque marking the site of the theater, recently placed in the telephone building which now occupies the spot by the Commonwealth Club of California and the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. At the right is George Van Buren, long-time telephone employee, who as a young man frequently played as a "super" on the California's stage.

Lighthouse Illumination

Most of the American lighthouses guarding ships against coastal rocks have now run the complete gamut of lighting in the last 200 years. They began with fish oil and then proceeded through sperm oil, rapeseed or colza oil, lard oil, vaporized kerosene with incandescent mantles and finally electricity upon which main dependence is put nowadays.
